
Scott W. Lutterloh

Director, Training and Education Division (N15) Chief of Naval Operations

Mr. Lutterloh is currently the Director, Training and Education Division (N-15) on the staff, Chief of Naval Operations. He established the directorate in October, 2008 and is responsible for policy, program and resource allocation for U.S. Navy Training and Education.

Previously, Mr. Lutterloh served as the Director/Deputy Director, Total Force Requirements Division (N-12) on the staff, Chief of Naval Operations from October, 2006. He was responsible for development, planning and programming of all U.S. Navy manpower requirements, and integrating military, civilian, and contractor constituencies across the total force.

Mr. Lutterloh served as Director, Training Systems Division in the Program Executive Office, Integrated Warfare Systems in Washington, D.C. As Program Manager, he was responsible for embedded training systems development, engineering, acquisition, installation, and maintenance onboard all surface ships in the U.S. Navy.

From October 2003 through February 2006, Mr. Lutterloh served as the Executive Director of the Center for Surface Combat Systems Training (CSCS), headquartered in Dahlgren, Va. He directed operations, maintenance, and tactical training for United States and international surface combat systems. From 1996 until the establishment CSCS in 2003, Mr. Lutterloh served at the AEGIS Training and Readiness Center (ATRC) as Director of Fleet Readiness and Training, Director of Special Projects, and as Executive Director from 1998 to 2004.

Prior to his assignment at ATRC, Mr. Lutterloh was the Director of the Logistics and Training Operating Center for LOGICON Syscon. In this capacity he provided expert program management services to the U.S. Navy and the Naval Sea Systems Command in the formulation and execution of the training strategy for the AEGIS Combat System.

Mr. Lutterloh earned his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1978, and was commissioned as an Ensign. He served in the United States Navy in a variety of positions including assignments as Main Propulsion Assistant on USS MacDonough (DDG-39) and the lead Surface Warfare Manpower, Personnel and Training Analyst on the staff of the Chief of Naval Operations. He departed from naval service as a Lieutenant in 1983.

Mr. Lutterloh has completed 13 years of Civilian Service, and was selected for promotion to the Senior Executive Service in October, 2006. His Service Awards include the Superior Civilian Service Award (2006), Meritorious Civilian Service Award (2001), Navy-Marine Corps Commendation Medal (1983), Navy Achievement Medal (1982), and a number of military campaign and service awards. He is a member of the Surface navy Association, American Society of Naval Engineers, and the U.S. Naval Institute.
